

Bernhard Streck

Bernhard Streck is a retired professor for Cultural and Social Anthropology (Ethnologie), who has runned the oldest institute of this subject – founded 1914 – at Leipzig University from 1994 until 2010. In earlier years he gave lectures at the universities of Heidelberg, Mainz, Berlin (FU) and Giessen after having studied anthropology in Bale/Switzerland and Frankfurt am Main in the years 1968-75. He did fieldwork in East and North-East Africa as well as in the Black Sea Area and his research interests enclose the ethnography of Africa, Gypsy studies, religious anthropology and the history of science. His main publications are: Sudan (1982/1989), Wörterbuch der Ethnologie (1987/2000), Die Halab (1996), Fröhliche Wissenschaft Ethnologie (1997), Ethnologie und Nationalsozialismus (2000), Translation and Ethnography (with Tullio Maranhao, 2003), Shifts and Drifts in Nomad-Sedentary Relations (with Stefan Leder, 2006), Die gezeigte und die verborgene Kultur (2007), Para-Ordnungen/Para-Orders (Behemoth, Journal on Civilisation IV, 2011), Sterbendes Heidentum (in press).